JUKEBOX BIZ IS IN A FATAL DECLINE

DISKERIES ARE NO HELP TO AILING INDUSTRY

Pop Names In A Big Rush To Legit Exposure

By Howard Rosenberg

The music business is now a grimy, grimy, grimy place. It is a place where the only way to get a record made is to have a name that is big enough to get a record made. The only way to get a record made is to have a name that is big enough to get a record made. The only way to get a record made is to have a name that is big enough to get a record made.

We've detected that JavaScript is disabled in this browser. Please enable JavaScript or switch to a supported browser to continue using twitter.com. You can see a list of supported browsers in our Help Center. Help Center What possible reasons can you have to download sites from the Wayback Machine? Missed hosting payments. Let's say you're super responsible webmaster. You always update and keep fresh content. You do security updates. You're on top of things. But one day, you visit your website and all your content is gone! It's in this moment that you remember that you forgot to change that credit card that was linked to your hosting account. Now all your content is gone! Dashed away by one false move...or is it? Enter our web Archive download bot. With a few simple clicks, you can be on your way to restoring a whole website - exactly like it used to be. Nostalgia. Maybe you played a computer game as a teenager or you used to frequently visit some hobby website. Many of these websites change or go offline, but with an archive.org download order, you can recover all your nostalgic memories. Simply go to our wayback machine download site and create your own web.archive.org download. This includes your whole website, up to 10 levels deep, which means all pages that are 10 clicks away from the front page. Your site was hacked. What if a more sinister plot involving a hacker compromising the security of your site arises? He's hijacked your site, and now all your content has been deleted and replaced with ads for his own benefit. Not to worry! We have you covered with a nice Wayback machine download of your website, as it was before disaster struck. Legal evidence. Should you ever find yourself embroiled in a legal battle over whatever the issue may be, The Wayback Downloader can help here too. Make a copy of the web archive data for use as evidence in lawsuits. For example, patent law and evidence of prior art. The Wayback Machine accepts removal requests, so it's a good idea to have your own copy in case the website disappears from the web archive. Take content from bankrupt competitor. What if one of your biggest competitors has gone out of business, and with their exit from the business they also took down their website? Remember the URL? Voila! You've got yourself a ton of useable information to populate your new site with one less competitor to worry about. Basically, this can be for any site in your industry that was taken offline. For recovering expired content. Sometimes you have good expired content, perhaps you found it with our service or with software like the Expired Article Hunter. Let's say you have a good PBN domain with high metrics, and you have another domain with good expired content. Now you can merge the two domains and rebuilding the expired content on the domain with high metrics. It's one of the quickest and best methods to build a PBN Use it as an alternative to hitrack. Hitrack is software to scrape live websites, but it doesn't do a very good job at scraping the internet archive. We rebuild websites as they once were, while hitrack simply copies a complete site, including all the headers and archive URLs. The web archive is a comprehensive backup of the web, looking as it did in different points of time. The mission of the web archive is to store the internet in its entirety at different points in time over the last 15-20 years. We developed a tool that downloads a website from the Wayback machine, to recover websites that were lost due to missed hosting payments or alternative reasons. This so called Wayback Downloader is a web scraper, that visits web.archive.org and allows customers to download a site from archive.org. A wayback machine download is the name Wayback Machine Downloader gives to the package of files that you need to recover a website. This includes HTML, CSS, JS and picture files. To download website from wayback machine, simply visit the Wayback Machine and find a URL from a specific date. Make sure to use the URL from the front page, because this will give the best results. Our software is webbased, so it works both for Windows and Linux/Mac users. The web archive and the Wayback machine are somewhat synonymous, so for all intents and purposes, you needn't make a differentiation between the two. The Wayback Machine is simply the name that Web Archive has given to their website, and is well known amongst individuals on the internet who have the desire to recover lost content or rebuild sites from the Wayback Machine. A Free Tool By Wayback Machine Downloader About this tool This tool is to download or copy websites that are currently online. The free version has a limit of 10MB. If you want to scrape historic websites, then use our other tool to download website from the Wayback Machine. Our website downloader is an online web crawler, which allows you to download complete websites, without installing software on your own computer. Why Are We The Best Website Copier? Easy to use No software installation, our site ripper is 100% webbased Email support 24/7 We also give away the first 10MB of data for free, which is enough for small websites and serves as a proof of concept for bigger customers. Website Ripping Features You can choose to either download a full site or scrape only a selection of files. For example, you can choose to: Save all data for offline browsing. This includes all HTML, CSS, javascript etc. This allows you to rip all content from another domain. Download all images from a website. This only saves image files, such as .gif, .jpeg/jpg and png. Scrape all video files. This is a custom setting that sends you all video files, such as avi, mp4, flv, mov, etc. Download all files from a website with a specific extension. This is a custom option for an extra price, depending on the file size and scope of the project. A common request is to download all PDF files from a specific domain. It is also possible to use free web crawlers such as hitrack, but they require extensive technical knowledge and have a steep learning curve. Neither are they web-based, so you have to install software on your own computer, and leave your computer on when scraping large websites. That means that you do not have to worry about difficult configuration options, or get frustrated with bad results. We provide email support, so you don't have to worry about the technical bits, or pages with a misaligned layout. Our online web crawler is basically an hitrack alternative, but it's simpler and we provide services such as installation of copied websites on your server, or WordPress integration for easy content management. Download all images from a website Some people do not want to download a full website, but only need specific files, such as images and video files. Our web crawler software makes it possible to download only specific file extensions such as .png, .jpeg, .flv, .mpeg4, pdf etc. For example, it is a perfect solution when you want to download all pricing and product specification files from your competitor: they are normally saved in .pdf files. It will save you the hassle of browsing their entire website! Reasons To Use An Online Website Downloader Copy a competitor's website Download websites for offline browsing An easy way to archive content and create backups for legal reasons Migrate static HTML websites to another host If your website was written in HTML - and didn't use a Content Management System - then this is also an excellent migration tool. Simply scrape the entire website and move all the html files to your new web host. We also have customers who like to create a "snapshot" of their website, similar to what the Wayback Machine does. A business owner - or lawyer from another party - might want to create a full backup of a certain website, so that he or she can later show how the website looked like in the past. In theory, the Internet Archive provides this service, but it rarely downloads a complete website. The Internet Archive also accepts removal requests and it is not possible to create a full backup at a specific time. You are basically limited to the merits of their algorithm. Our software provides an excellent alternative to freeze legal digital evidence, at your request, making us the best website downloader for legal cases. No matter which of the above problems you need to solve, our site ripper is there for you with powerful servers and free support during business hours. A man offers an inverted bottle of water to the Techno Viking. Techno Viking is an internet phenomenon or meme based on a video from the 2000 Fuckparade in Berlin, Germany. Summary The four-minute video shot by experimental video artist Matthias Fritsch at the Fuckparade on 8 July 2000[1] begins with the title "Kneecam No. 1". The camera is on a group of dancing people with a blue-haired woman in front. A man stumbles into the scene grabbing the woman. A bare-chested man (known colloquially as the Techno Viking) wearing a Mjölmir pendant enters the scene while turning to that man. He grabs him by the arms and the camera follows, showing the confrontation. The bare-chested man pushes the guy back in the direction he came. He looks at him sternly and then points his finger at him, ensuring he behaves.[notes 1] Then the camera follows the bare-chested man as the techno parade continues. Another observer comes from the back of the scene offering an inverted bottle of water to him. As the situation calms down, the bare-chested man starts to dance down Rosenthaler Straße (52°31′33.8″N 13°24′13.2″E﻿ / ﻿52.526056°N 13.403667°E﻿ / 52.526056; 13.403667 (filming location)) to techno music.[2] Reception and release Fritsch uploaded the video to the internet in 2001.[3] Fritsch intended to raise questions of whether the action was real or staged.[1] In 2006 an unknown user re-published it to YouTube, and it went viral in 2007. According to Fritsch, its popularity began on a Central American pornography site.[4] After being posted on Break.com, it peaked on 28 September at more than 1 million views per day and was watched by over 10 million people over 6 months. More than 700 responses and edited versions were posted.[1][5][6][7] It was the #1 clip on Rude Tube's series-three episode Drink and Drugs.[8] Mathew Cullen and Weezer wanted to include Techno Viking in their compilation of internet memes for the "Pork and Beans" music video but were unable to.[9] Techno Viking was also rendered in oils as part of a series on internet memes.[10] By mid-2010, the video had generated over 20 million hits on YouTube alone.[3] as of January 2013[update], the original version had more than 16 million views.[4] Fritsch mounted an installation and the online Techno Viking Archive "to research the strategies of participatory practice in digital social networks"[11] and presented lectures on the reception of the video. His Music from the Masses project was suggested by the Techno Viking experience: it explores web collaboration by providing silent films for artists to provide soundtracks.[1][3][6][11] In response to legal action by the man featured in the video, access to the Techno Viking video itself has been restricted and annotations on YouTube blocked since late 2009.[1] Identity and lawsuit Some suspected Keith Jardine was the Techno Viking before the actual man's lawyer stated this to not be the case. Fritsch did not know the man's name at the time of filming.[4][6][12] A man who appeared in the 2009 "Bodybuilding" broadcast of the German television show segment Raab in Gefahr[13] was taken to be Techno Viking in a YouTube upload.[14] In 2008, fans claimed MMA fighter Keith Jardine was Techno Viking.[15] The lawyer of the Techno Viking argued that his client had never been a public figure and that he did not want to become one.[16] The unnamed man's court case against Fritsch concerning infringement of personality rights opened in Berlin on 17 January 2013.[4][17][18] In June, a decision was reached for the plaintiff and Fritsch was ordered to pay the man €13,000 in damages, almost all he had made from YouTube ads and sales of Techno Viking merchandise, plus €10,000 in court costs, and to cease publication of his image.[12][19][20][21][22] Documentary film Fritsch raised money with a crowdfunding campaign to make a documentary film about the case, The Story of Technoviking,[21] which was released in 2015.[23] Spoof Several sources on the Internet make the false claim that one Gunther Ackerman is the original Techno Viking, who was featured in a spoof interview by the Irish Satirical News Site Waterford Whispers News.
